

Cafs' Commitment to Eliminating Family Violence

Cafs is committed to eliminating Family Violence and to promoting and supporting the safety of families experiencing Family Violence.

Cafs acknowledges that there are people who experience higher rates of family violence – these include Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander women and children, women and children from culturally and/or linguistically diverse backgrounds, women and children living with a disability, identifying as LGBTIQ+ and from LGBTIQ+ families.

Cafs is committed to promoting gender equality as a critical part of Family Violence prevention and believes that all people experiencing Family Violence should be treated with dignity, respect and fairness.

Cafs believes that everyone has the right to live free from Family Violence and shares in an understanding that a whole community response is required for individuals and families to live safely.

Cafs believes that the responsibility for Family Violence always rests with the person using violence and has an unwavering commitment to building inclusive, safe, responsive and accountable programs.
